

I was on holiday for a week since the last report so there's a bit less than usual...

International Women's Day

- This was a full day of events and attracted familiar faces as well as lots of new ones, including the international society women's group, so was really successful. Sometimes it's difficult to attract international students, especially those with children to events so I was really please with how it went. We also raised around £100 for women in Haiti and received lots of clothes for donation. It took a lot of planning and publicity.

Student parents

- We have a few more members on our facebook group but are still struggling for a successful launch.

Riveters

- We've started doing weekly film showings on a Friday lunchtime which seem to have a fair amount of interest
- The play: due to a few mishaps and time constraints we won't be able to put on a full production but are looking to do a shorter version with a workshop attached about consent
- Reclaim the Night: the route has been accepted by the police so planning can finally start, we have some acts confirmed for the evening.
- Women's week: I've been in contact with various editors of the paper to 'take it over' for women's week, there's been a great response so hopefully this will be a good one!

Societies committee: I've been attending meetings and helping contact societies about decisions made
